Exemplars in Positive Psychology at the Movies

An exemplar film is a 5-psi (ΨΨΨΨΨ) movie that meets most, if not all, of two sets of criteria:

- 1) The positive psychology movie criteria set forth by Niemiec (2007): Balanced portrayal of a character strength, struggles/obstacles that challenge the strength, strength is used to overcome adversity, and an inspiring or uplifting tone.
 - 2) The factors constituting signature strengths as noted by Peterson and Seligman (2004): Strength is displayed the majority of the time in relevant settings, strength is “owned” by the character, and the strength is recognized by others as highly characteristic of that character.

Questions for Classroom, Therapy, and Movie Group Discussions

What positive psychology themes did you see in the film? Consider strengths, virtues, and theory.

What strengths did the characters exhibit? Which characters portrayed these strengths? What personality or emotional traits make up the character strength? Was the portrayal realistic?

What combination of strengths stood out for you? How did the strengths build on one another?

What obstacles or setbacks did the characters face? How did they use their strengths to overcome the adversity? What specific steps did they take? Would they have overcome the obstacle if they did not have that character strength?

Did one or more characters portray a contrasting perspective? Does the role of the antithesis character make the role of the virtuous character more salient?

Does the character's signature strength improve his or her other strengths? Does it impact or elicit strengths in other characters?

How does the character's strength influence his or her mood, attitude, and behavior?

Is the character conscious of his or her strength? Is mindfulness of one's strengths a prerequisite to using them?

How does this character's strength affect the larger culture or society?

How do the characters in the film live a life of connection and/or meaning?

What characters are most like you and most unlike you?

Did you experience cinematic elevation when watching the film? At what points did you feel this emotion? Why do you suppose you felt it at that moment?

How might this film (character) inspire you to make a change or do something different in your life? What is the first step you will take?

If you found yourself in a similar situation, how would you react? How would you use your strengths to handle the situation?

From a cinematic standpoint, what was the director trying to say? How did he/she say it?

What does this movie teach you about the human condition? Is there a way such a film can contribute to a better society?

Positive Psychology Movie Clips

Note: When using film clips for presentations, please follow the fair use exemption of U.S. copyright law, which limits film clips to 3 minutes or 10% of the film (whichever is less; see www.harlingen.isd.tenet.edu/copyright.html)

- Film: American Beauty (1999)
 Clip: 1:01:30 – 1:04:30
 Description: Two characters watch a plastic bag floating in the wind
 Themes: Best portrayal of the appreciation of beauty strength in cinema history; watching this film is likely to result in what Haidt (2006) calls the emotion of elevation.
- Film: A Beautiful Mind (2001)
 Clip: 1:43:06 – 1:45:40
 Description: Wife decides on living arrangements for her husband, a man coping with schizophrenia
 Themes: Connectedness; shift from the head to the heart; faith in one's partner
- Film: Life as a House (2001)
 Clip: 1:57:36 – 2:00:36
 Description: Mother arrives to tell her son his father whom he has recently bonded with has passed away; father gives voice-over
 Themes: Meaning and purpose in life; community support; letting go; redemption
- Film: Field of Dreams (1989)
 Clip: 4:25 – 7:25
 Description: Iowa farmer hears a voice in his cornfields repeating the phrase, "If you build it, he will come." The end of the clip includes a snippet from another positive psychology movie, Harvey, starring James Stewart.
 Themes: Trust and faith; listening to God, intuition, inner voice; rejecting and denying one's "still, small voice."
- Film: The Legend of Bagger Vance (2000)
 Clip: 1:15:10 – 1:18:10
 Description: Golfer gets coached out of a "slump" by his caddy
 Themes: Flow; integrity; "finding your authentic swing;" patience
- Film: Mind the Gap (2004)
 Clip: 1:33:01 – 1:35:13
 Description: A man whose suicide attempt was interrupted consults with a priest
 Themes: Importance of forgiveness; benefit for self and others
- Film: Wings of Desire (1987, Germany)
 Clip: 1:32:05 – 1:35:05
 Description: Angel decides to become a man and makes the transition to the world
 Themes: Beginner's mind; use of all the senses; mindfulness; appreciation and joy

Syllabus of a Positive Psychology Course that Uses Movies

(Adapted with permission from Tayyab Rashid, PhD)

Positive Psychology: An Experiential Course

Psychologists have traditionally treated mental illness from a perspective of repairing damaged habits, damaged drives, damaged childhoods, and damaged brains. Psychology is not only the study of human weakness and damage; it is also a study of strengths, optimism, happiness, hope, and resiliency. This introductory course will survey core human character strengths and virtues. The course is largely experiential and includes a lot of classroom activities. It presents practical ways of using one's character strengths to promote and maintain well-being and happiness. There are no traditional exams. Grades will be based on class participation, watching movies on character strengths, writing weekly reaction papers, and a personal signature strength enhancing project.

Appendix G

Positive Psychology Movies

Films That Can Inspire and Build Virtues and Character Strengths

This appendix consists only of Positive Psychology Movies. These ratings take the quality of the film into consideration; however, we emphasize each film's pedagogical value and its ability to inspire viewers.

The positive psychology film meets one or more of the following criteria (Niemiec, 2007):

- 1) Balanced portrayal of a character strength
- 2) Realistic depiction of obstacles or setbacks for the character
- 3) Character uses his/her strength(s) to overcome or face the barriers and adversity
- 4) Uplifting or inspiring tone (including music, cinematography, or film mood)

ΨΨΨΨΨ

Excellent (Must-see film). Outstanding portrayal of a character strength; represents several strengths and virtues; and/or excellent film for teaching and/or clinical purposes; satisfies three or four of the above criteria.

ΨΨΨΨ

Very Good (Definitely worth your time). Good portrayal of strength in leading or supporting character roles; satisfies two or three of the above criteria.

ΨΨΨ

Good (Potentially worth your time). Decent portrayal of a strength; strength loosely represented, not fully balanced, or is of minor emphasis; a minor character portrays a strength; satisfies one or two of the above criteria.

We do not list or rate films that only qualify for one or two psi symbols; they are not good examples of positive psychology movies or a good investment of your time.
